As we steamed away from the dock hundreds of handkerchiefs waved us good bye, until they and the land faded from our view, and the sun sank over the wide waters. Spent the night comfortably, the vessel making 10 knots an hour. 26. - Clear, with high cold winds all day; but making good time, overcoats and winter clothing in demand, our good ship rides the deep blue waves like a thing of life, other vessels seen at times in the distance. As I write a number of immense porpoises, probably frightened by the ship, show themselves half out of the water, they seem to be from four to eight feet in length. How do they subsist; or, what do they live on in this briny deep? I do not envy them their habitation, think...
