Excerpt: . . . which thwarted and dashed all his hopes. And yet that old man never complained, but went right ahead. He finally succeeded in a large measure. One of the lessons taught us by that old man is the necessity for patience. That is equally true of him whose birthday we celebrate. General Washington rendered to his country no greater service than that which he did between the treaty of peace and the making of the constitution, and that service was rendered not on the battlefield, but when he was with patience and courage holding together the discordant elements which had come out of that great war of the revolution, and which were threatening to separate, disintegrate and destroy the results of that great struggle. If you will permit me, in the presence of these professors, I will advise you to read that chapter in the life of Washington in which he reached the very highest point of greatness. When his soldiers, feeling that injustice had been done them under the instigation of General Gates, and others were threatening to destroy the fruits of the great victory which they had won under his leadership. How he waited and waited! How he held together all those discordant and disturbing elements till, in the Providence of God, and the operation of social and political forces, the constitution of the United States was formed and fixed as the basis upon which has been built the grand and glorious progress of...
