Reviews

The book is great and fantastic. It is written in straightforward words and phrases rather than difficult to understand. You won't really feel monotony at any time of your respective time (that's what catalogues are for regarding should you question me).

Excerpt: . . . Enter Primitive and Mrs. Belford. Prim. Now do, for my sake, pray, pray justify yourself. Mrs. B. Sir, I have told you I am slandered. Prim. Well but consider, what Mrs. Gabriel fays is persactly true; I know nothing of your history, she does; and if I should defile this innocent abode, by introducing to it a person of suspicious character--Mrs. B. Suspicious! Prim. Pardon me; these were my nieces words, not mine: and when (he added, her husbands constancy might be corrupted--Mrs. B. Corrupted! and by me!--Sir, I can only answer, I am innocent; and if this be doubted, let me be gone. I know, by losing you, Ive lost my best, my only friend; but if you think Id be indebted for roy safety to those who say 1 would disgrace my benefactor, and mar connubial and domestic love, you know but little of me. I cannot guess the motive for their cruelty; nor should I, by accusing others, vindicate myself; but let me tell you, Sir, slander is a rank and poisonous weed, and never yet took root in pure unsullied ground. Prim. Well then, why dont you explain yourself--Plague ont! why not tell me your name, your family, your history--Come now do, do be good-natured. , Mrs. B. Alas! I dare not. Prim. Dare not! Mrs. B. No; my pride wont suffer me: and my story would but expose one, whom, spite of all my wrongs, I still am weak...
